

CODA Site Visit Rescheduled

September 29 - October 1, 2015

To: UF College of Dentistry,

It's official - the college's CODA site visit has been rescheduled to fall 2015. The new dates apply to site visits for the DMD program and the graduate programs for endodontics, oral pathology, orthodontics, pediatric dentistry, periodontics and prosthodontics.

All of the programs have completed mock self studies, so the timeline change will require some reworks of the self studies so that the data reported is fresh. The site visitors are generally interested in the last two years of pertinent data although they can request up to seven years of data.

The second version of the DMD self study is currently being reviewed by several consultants as well as three of our faculty who volunteered to give the document a close read to ensure consistency and quality. Once their feedback is incorporated into the self study, the DMD accreditation steering committee will be working to define a new accreditation timeline and deadlines to meet our new site visit dates.

The next steering committee meeting is scheduled for November 13 and, following that, I'll be able to share new deadlines, meetings and plans.

And I want to thank everyone, again, who is working in the best interests of the college and for your willingness to modify the college's plans and your personal plans to meet CODA's request for a rescheduled site visit.

Thank you,
Boyd Robinson, D.D.S., M.Ed.
Interim Dean
UF College of Dentistry
